CB OG @CharlesStonkson · May 21, 2022

You've seen my experience. Needless to say, I think I have *slightly* more than all of you combined when it comes to small molecule biotech companies. But sure...keep laughing. New sites keep opening, patents keep being enrolled. We'll see who's laughing when the p3 reads out

Phloeodes Diabolicus @PatricioMarceso · May 21, 2022

You've read the hundreds of pages & tweets detailing WHAT is wrong. Instead of countering that with actual content you keep referring to your expertise (and try to insult others). Experts usually don't need to repeatedly state that they're experts. That seems rather desperate.

Vinnie @Vinnie66007649 · May 23, 2022

I have read hundreds of pages & numerous tweets with PhuDsters as well as the pro \$SAVA. Simple conclusion: The allegations are false & lies. PhuDsters simply can't explain why FDA & Korean MFDS allow trials go forward?

Jack be quick @jbql88 · May 23, 2022

Pretty simple really, at this point FDA and Korean MFDS accept the safety data. The contention that they have rigorously evaluated let alone validated the \$SAVA efficacy data to date is folly. To say the quality of this data is poor is generous.

Ph.D @PhDUCLA · May 23, 2022

Jack not so bright....That's all health authorities do..review data to support phase 3 clinical trials. It better be robust and compliant! They ask a ton of questions and diligently review prior to approval

Jack be quick @jbql88 · May 23, 2022

Review, yes, but rigorously review efficacy at this stage, no. Even \$SAVA has retracted any claim of efficacy. Take your ill informed potty mouth tirades elsewhere.

Ph.D @PhDUCLA · May 23, 2022

They review every thing before phase 3. Safety efficacy from submitted CSR. Run shorty run! 🤔

Jack be quick @jbql88 · May 23, 2022

It is clear you don't understand what the word rigorous means. Your childish rants highlight your ignorance and lack of objectivity. \$SAVA

Of course no rigorous for nda approval...however certainly rigorous for subjecting thousands of patients for P3. Run shorty run. What a sham shorts trying to run! 🤔

- Jack be quick @jbql88 · May 23, 2022
It is correct to say the FDA is allowing Phase 3 to proceed at this date. It is not correct to say the FDA has endorsed the phase 3 trials. The SPA is not an endorsement. You are worthy of no more of my time. \$SAVA

Let me make it simple for ya Jack...if the total data didn't support P3, which must be reviewed and assessed, then no Health Authority would allow/approve a P3 clinical trial exposing patients to an investigational drug. Run Jack RUN! 🤡
- 1 3 7
- Jack be quick @jbql88 · May 23, 2022
@PhDUCLA The FDA makes no judgement the data "support" conducting a Phase 3 trial. They only review to determine patients are not exposed to unreasonable or significant risk. Once cleared the company is free to waste shareholder money on a hopeless drug. See Remoxy. \$SAVA

- Phloeodes Diabolicus @PatricioMarceso · May 23, 2022
Yeah, you're right, who cares, let's just discard the scientific basis. It's impossible that the clinical data are presented in a more favorable light than warranted, because why on earth would they do that? Let's just not question things. Hooray.
- CB OG @CharlesStonkson · May 23, 2022
The scientific basis is the multiple mouse studies, med chem assays, and the three Phase 2 clinical trials. Not a couple microscopy images in a crap journal. But please lecture me on the science of drug development...move me, astonish me...delight my eyes
- Phloeodes Diabolicus @PatricioMarceso · May 23, 2022
Yup, it's exactly those mouse studies that are being questioned. And if it only were in one journal...
But who cares, shall we boast and post pictures of our cars in front of our offices instead? Sounds like more fun!
- CB OG @CharlesStonkson · May 23, 2022
As someone who has worked in actual drug development for over 10 years...I'm telling you...no one with any relevance cares about those microscopy images. You want to crossover from art appreciation to pharmaceuticals or learn to trade/invest? Maybe listen to ppl who are successful
- CB OG @CharlesStonkson · May 23, 2022
Not bitter, jealous internet trolls trying to make a name for themselves by any means necessary by constantly harassing actual scientists, misrepresenting their own knowledge, and even victim shaming someone who was raped as a child...(love how Adrian continues to defend that)

As Bik used often: Honest Q, is it right & ethical to criticize, smear with lies, laugh at & bad mouth Remi & Wang in tweets when both of them don't use Twitter?

Jesse brodtkin @jesse_brodtkin · May 24, 2022

It's a public company so it's definitely ethical to criticize. In fact, you rely on other members of the public to perform due diligence. There have been no lies. Bad mouthing comes with the territory when you perpetrate a fraud on vulnerable patients and gullible investors.

Vinnie @Vinnie66007649 · May 24, 2022

When should we have our 1 to 1 about $SAVA Publications?

Jesse brodtkin @jesse_brodtkin · May 24, 2022

Go for it. You are free to tweet at will.

Finding Nemo @Nemo_is_NoOne · May 25, 2022

Just wondering why Vinnie and the other bulls don't ask Wang and the journal EiC to join conversations. Wang can explain his science and the data in the articles, journals will have, again, opportunities to justify their decisions

Vinnie @Vinnie66007649 · May 25, 2022

How the hell you know about the Journal articles? You have zero understanding about how drugs work but dogmatically following fake PhuDsters to short stocks. Shorting urgent needed developmental drug is human scum.

Finding Nemo @Nemo_is_NoOne · May 25, 2022

AD is a terrible condition, a tremendous burden on families. It is unethical and immoral to take advantage of the elderly people just because the need is urgent. $SAVA faked data, cheated in the clinical trials, @hoauyanwang @lindsaybbar and Remi are the human scum.

Vinnie @Vinnie66007649 · May 25, 2022

You are definitely lost in the coral sea. So U.S. FDA, Korean MFDS are so incompetent, misjudging their reviews, & assessments. Yet a person like you can tell $SAVA is fake. My advice, go back to school & learn some basic science.

Finding Nemo @Nemo_is_NoOne · May 25, 2022

FDA has been auditing $SAVA and Wang lab, why don't you find out more about it?

Vinnie @Vinnie66007649 · May 25, 2022

I don't need to find out, all $SAVA trials are on going. I repeat: 333 AD deaths @$970M cost/day. Anyone delay/stop any AD trials are Public Enemy #1 plus causing suffering from patients & families. You decide.

Liar, liar, liar, Jesse does not like liar. Your hero Adrian was in Discord SAVA general, same as your buddy Aurko. I believe they were booted out. You could try to join, they might allow you in as special member.
-  Phloeodes Diabolicus @PatricioMarceso · May 26, 2022
You talk about people with different opinions being booted out as if it were an acceptable or even good thing. Maybe you should pause and think there.
No way to learn if not from people with different knowledge/opinions than yours.
-  Vinnie @Vinnie66007649 · May 26, 2022
Beetle, ur welcome to join Discord SAVA General, it's up to the moderators to decide. I am not the moderator & Aurko wanted to be my friend & help me while he was in Discord.
-  Phloeodes Diabolicus @PatricioMarceso · May 26, 2022
I was/am sincerely trying to help you too. Then again, perhaps people like COLUMN and AD3 were/are also trying to. But that is precisely why it is important to get the full picture and shape your own opinion. The Discords don't help with that, they rather hinder that process.
-  Ph.D @PhDUCLA · May 26, 2022
Discords have plenty of debate and discussions, what isn't tolerated are blatant lies/FUD from shorts, the same ones being repeated that the standard twitter clown show...you clowns are toast! 🤡
-  Phloeodes Diabolicus @PatricioMarceso · May 26, 2022
How does the Discord explain that the same mouse brains show up in different treatment groups in several independent instances and this was concealed by showing different areas, stretching the images and/or changing their contrast?

Ok, that's fair. Then you and I share the trait of not blocking anyone. Many other $SAVA disciples have blocked me though because of me being friendly but critical(?)
My question to you about the evidence here remains the same though.

Arthur Singer @sing3r · May 27, 2022
I understand there's a large group with many resources in science, journalism, big pharma, within Universities and at some government agencies who worked in concert to find all of $SAVA's flaws great and small and that you refuse ever concede on any of them. What's to discuss?

Phloeodes Diabolicus @PatricioMarceso · May 27, 2022
You do realize that that is per definition a textbook conspiracy theory?
But I meant more: based on what do you think UCSF hasn't withdrawn?

Arthur Singer @sing3r · May 27, 2022
Labelling and belittling again, bravo!
To your point: "based on what do you think UCSF hasn't withdrawn?"
My answer is that I can READ. Their first emails were legally problematic at best, they already had folks in the trial, they decided not to be bullied, good sense, etc.

Phloeodes Diabolicus @PatricioMarceso · May 27, 2022
Labelling and belittling? How so?
What does your reading ability have to do with anything here? My point is more: you are referring to a website that has been last updated April 26th, no?

Phloeodes Diabolicus @PatricioMarceso · May 27, 2022
You enjoy your weekend too! Speaking about honesty: I'd appreciate if you admitted mixing up the two trials.

When they switched topic to talk about Remi, published data & fraud, it is an obvious sign they were kicking themselves for the loss. I don't expect they will pay the bet, if it does, I m sure the money will go to charity or Dr Bik's patreon acct. The winner will decide.

Simply goes to show that harassment, intimidation and economic pressure drive decision making (or indecision) at both journals and universities. This is NOT about scientific integrity but rather an economic degeneracy that is overtaking science.

I start 🤪 this most shorted SAVA stock not just in Alzheimer's. This apparent "GARBAGE" drug, according to Jesse, may be able to treat: PD, epilepsy, small lung, skin, pancreatic cancers, etc. just to name a few. Priority is to get P3 to completion.

'May be able to treat'??? Based on which clinical trial? Citation needed 🤔

How far up your own asshole does one need to reach to determine that PTI-125 can treat Parkinson's, epilepsy, and multiple cancers.

Elisabeth Bik @MicrobiomDigest · Jun 3, 2022

Based on which mechanism would it be able to treat such different diseases? Epilepsy might make sense, but treating cancers as well? Real answers, please, no insults. I will assume an insult means that there are no facts to base the above statement on.

A quick pubmed search pulls up several papers exploring filamin A and cancer

Here is one paper proposing simufilams potential in cancer

cellandbioscience.biomedcentral.com/articles/10.11...

Yue et al. Cell & Bioscience 2013, 3:7

effectiveness of different types of therapeutic DNA damage agents to the cancer subtype [126].

The role of filamin-A in DNA damage response presents an intriguing possibility that targeting filamin-A may be useful for cancer therapy. In a panel of human melanoma cell lines established from cancer patients, a correlation between filamin-A expression and drug sensitivity was observed, i.e. the lower filamin-A level the cell line had, the more sensitive the cell was to bleomycin and cisplatin treatment [127]. In addition to chemotherapeutic drugs, filamin-A deficiency sensitizes melanoma and breast cancer cells to ionizing radiation [88,89]. These data were further confirmed by xenograft animal models, which demonstrated that tumors generated from filamin-A deficient cells displayed a better response to chemotherapy [127]. In addition, Nallapalli et al. found that filamin-A played an important role during lung tumor growth [76]. These studies predict that inhibition of filamin-A sensitizes cancer cells to specific therapeutic DNA damage agents. Considering the metastatic role of filamin-A in cancer cell mobility and reattachment to secondary sites, it is also conceivable to predict that inhibition of filamin-A would also reduce distant cancer metastasis. Thus, filamin-A may also be an ideal therapeutic target for metastasis control.

Small molecules to block filamin-A function have been attempted. PTI-125 is novel compound binding to filamin-A with 200 femtomolar affinity, which disrupts the toxic signaling of amyloid- $\beta$ 42 ( $A\beta$ 42), reducing amyloid-related Alzheimer's disease pathogenesis [137]. The same research group also designed filamin-A peptide fragments containing the Ultra-low-dose naloxone (NLX) binding site, which blocked the protective effect of NLX on both the MOR-Gs coupling and downstream cAMP accumulation induced by chronic morphine, presumably by interfering with NLX's binding to filamin-A [138]. Considering that the dimerization of filamin-A at the C-terminus is a common feature for filamin-A function, we propose that disruption of the filamin-A dimer formation could be a valuable approach.

In addition to simply inhibiting filamin-A expression, alternative strategies to disrupt the filamin-A functions have been suggested. Because filamin-A cleavage has been shown to be associated with reduced metastasis, Bedolla et al. suggest that strategies to induce filamin-A cleavage may be developed to reduce cancer metastasis [114]. This strategy may be feasible because it is known that filamin-A proteolysis by calpains is regulated by AKT-dependent phosphorylation at serine 2152 [139], and treatment with PI3K inhibitor that abrogates AKT activity induces filamin-A cleavage and localization of the cleavage product into nucleus [140].

In summary, due to its multiple functions as a scaffolding protein, filamin-A integrates intracellular signaling

FLNA also interacts with many proteins related to cancer metastasis and high levels of FLNA have been correlated with increased metastatic potential. Perhaps simufilam can block some of these interactions. Obviously needs further study

Returning the homeostasis of FLNA levels may well interfere with various disease processes. Simufilam has the potential to achieve this as demonstrated in Bordey's work at Yale. The claimed altered conformations of FLNA and femtomolar affinity are NOT required elements.

Adrian H @Adrian_H ... what does "returning the homeostasis of FLNA levels" even mean when the molecule does not even bind to its supposed target?

IT IS ALL MADE UP. (Including Bordey's claims about effects of Simufilimflam in their epilepsy model)

I love it, anything related to FLNA, misfolded protein is made up & fraud. New Science according to Adrian. A Bordey of Yale is fraud too.

Honestly, you must know what I'm saying. Remember, not everything which creates and demonstrates a beneficial downstream effect has a clearly defined and understood upstream mechanism of action. Efficacy alone is sufficient, especially in terminal diseases.
